"No Hunting or Fishing" signs will soon be posted on college land, applying to both outsiders and community members. This legislation expresses the sentiment that a duck on the pond is worth more than having to duck buckshot on the bank.

A committee of the Board of Fellows (R. Gregory, J. Wallen, D. Corkran, H. Bergman) is investigating the possibility of making BMC a year-round proposition. The newly formed committee has thus far considered tentative suggestions, financial matters and various plans of dividing up the school year in case such a plan were found workable.

Two colleges which recently expressed an interest in BMC life and government are now studying our constitution. Henry Bergman mailed to Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y., and to Park College, Parkville, Mo., which is drawing up a constitution of its own, copies of the constitution, community charters, and catalogs along with letters describing our set-up.

Acting on resolutions passed at the Student meeting of October 28 regarding announcement of room for Negro veterans at BMC, investigation of possibilities for financial aid to Negro students and the suggestion that applications from Negroes be obtained by means of direct publicity, the faculty agreed to admit three Negro boys as well as three Negro girls. The job of recruiting has been left to a committee composed of Bill Levi, Eddie Lowinsky and Jeanne Belcher.

The faculty has accepted the tentative Senior Division plans of Eva Schlein in Writing, Vera Baker in Art, Ike Nakata in Sociology, Francis Foster in Art, and Alexa McLane in American Social History. The final graduation plan of Patsy Lynch in Music was approved.

A summary of suggestions submitted by the community regarding the small dormitory for girls was made November 26 by the group of table secretaries chosen at the community meeting which took place during Housing Week, the week of November 23. This summary will be presented to the Housing Committee, which will in turn bring the questions back to the community in a clarified, disentangled and orderly form, with the roof sloping toward the gutters, full-view mirrors lining the walls, and unobstructed sun-bathing.
